Excerpt: . . . ticed and is one that will contribute vitally to the development of the science of supervision. In other words, it is a program that provides for the measurement of a genuinely professional performance of the supervisory functions: A. Goals or outcomes to be attained through supervision. a. The development of teaching skill in applying the principles of method, employing good devices, and practicing appropriate technique in the teaching of a particular subject or subjects. b. The maintenance of a high scholastic attainment on the part of the pupils taught by the teachers being trained. c. Organization of a well-balanced course of study. Other goals might be set up in addition to these, but these three call for a thoroughgoing program of measurement. This is especially true of the first goal if it is undertaken in any serious fashion. It is the focal point of the supervisory...
