Grackles were found at the Oberlin roost from May 16 until the end of the second week in October--a difference of nearly four weeks between the two species. Mr. Brewster describes the woods occupied by the robins as a point toward which the host converged from all directions, singly or in small companies. The grackles approached their roost from one direction only, and arrived in larger or smaller flocks. The feeding habits of the robin are therefore different from those of the grackle Sometimes the robins were almost equalled in numbers by other species which shared the roost with them But the grackles far outnumbered all the other species seeking the protection of their roost. The fact that many robins rear two broods in a season and that the grackles rarely if ever rear more than one in this locality, would of necessity make some difference in the roosting habits of the two species. So wide a range in the time of nesting among the different grackle individuals--April 20 to June 10--prolongs the molting season and occupancy of the roost beyond that of the robin, even with his two broods to rear. If the molted feathers, which were carefully gathered daily, can give accurate information, it is certain that the period of molting is at least a week shorter with the robin than with the grackle The period of incubation is a day or two shorter, and...
